Genesee Land Trust announces it is the recipient of Bullis Fund Submitted article

September 14 - Genesee Land Trust, the Rochester area's local land trust protecting over 3,000 acres in Wayne County, has won a matching grant from the Bullis Fund via the Rochester Area Community Foundation to preserve and protect the Cornwall Preserve. The Bullis Fund was begun by a Wayne County family for the purpose of enriching the community of Wayne County. The Cornwall project absolutely supports the family's wishes.

Genesee Land Trust, working to protect the Cornwall Preserve in Pultneyville, is reaching out to the residents of Wayne County to support this project with donations. The Bullis Fund will match every donation by residents of Wayne County, of any amount. Since this historic project was first made public, Genesee Land Trust has received many donations from those who live in Wayne County, many who have added heart-warming notes that reference their childhood memories, and their frequent visits to these 74 acres with Lake Ontario shoreline, an historic cemetery, farm fields and places for people to enjoy. One resident talked about enjoying the sight of "soaring hawks." This is the place that Genesee Land Trust is protecting. The Bullis Fund is helping greatly and the donations of Wayne County residents make the project that much easier. Donations of any amount will help.

Genesee Land Trust asks all to please consider being a part of this great initiative and send their donations to Genesee Land Trust at 46 Prince St., Suite LL005, Rochester, NY 14607 or go to <http://www.geneseeandtrust.org/donate.aspx?id=33>. For any questions, Please call Gay Mills, Executive Director at (585) 256-2130.

For over 200 years the Cornwall family has lived on and cared for this land. Now it is your turn. We have a window of opportunity to save this land and we need your help today!
