The Genesee Land

Trust has reached an agreement to preserve 241 acres of farmland in Walworth, Wayne County.

Under the agreement, the land will continue to be privately owned by Larry DeMinck, but the Trust and the town of Walworth will hold a conservation easement preventing development.

The farm has been in the DeMinck family for two generations.

The conservation easement was made possible with the financial help of a state grant and a federal grant.

Genesee Land Trust protects almost 5,000 acres of woods, wetlands, waterways, and farmland.
